Ready To Move, a Georgia-based moving and delivery services company, will open franchised units across Georgia and the Southeast

Partnering with franchise consulting company, NEXT Franchise Systems, to develop a low-investment opportunity, Ready To Move is ready to move into franchising full steam ahead.

FORSYTH, GA – Paxton and Jennifer Taylor, co-founders of Ready To Move, a commercial and residential moving company, announced plans today that call for the company to open franchise territories across the United States. The first franchises will open in Georgia and surrounding states in 2017, with locations across the United States by 2018.

The Ready To Move franchise opportunity will offer a low initial investment and will be geared towards owner/operators interested in owning their own moving and delivery business.

Jennifer said she is eager to launch the Ready To Move franchise by partnering with NEXT Franchise Systems, a Macon-based franchise development and consulting company. “There aren’t many other moving or delivery companies around that offer the range of service -- locally and nationally -- that we do, which is why we’ve been so successful,” said Jennifer. “We couldn’t be more excited to partner with NEXT to rapidly expand our brand.”

Dale Waite, Managing Partner at NEXT, said the company works solely with small businesses that are “proven success stories” and are “poised to become successful franchise businesses from the start.” “Ready to Move is not just a moving company, and that is what really stood out for us. We saw a business model that is working extremely well financially, an efficient operation that is easy to replicate and scale, and owners that are enthusiastic about what they do,” said Dale. “The growth potential for Ready To Move is unlimited, and we’re thrilled to work with Paxton, Jennifer, and the Ready To Move family.”

Paxton said creating a franchise system for Ready To Move has always been on his mind. “We’ve created a solid reputation here in Macon, and all over Georgia, and we’ve always wanted to take the business to the next level by having franchises all over the country,” said Paxton.
